

Further support available, for you, from our Occupational Health Providers

Our Occupational Health and Employee Assistance provider, PAM, are committed to providing ongoing support during this Covid crisis and they have a new service for OH Employee Support.

It's a self-referral service for employees. You call the Glasgow Office on 0141 428 3900 and provide your details - name, date of birth, telephone number and employer. You will be asked brief details of the nature of the reason for your call and an appointment time will be offered for an OH Adviser to call you back.

The adviser will discuss your health related queries and provide support and signposting. PAM can provide you with advice on issues such as working from home, work station set up, physical issues, emotional support and Covid 19 health advice. Your manager will be provided with very brief information that you have made contact for support and whether there is any further input recommended from your manager.

Any managers who want advice or recommendations to support their employees with work related concerns or fitness for work queries are encouraged to make a management referral. OH are still operating via a telephone model and are still there to support you and your teams. Please remember to ensure that employee's telephone numbers are up to date on OHIO should a referral be required.

Physiotherapy Provision Update

Our OH Physiotherapy service have suspended all face to face consultations until further notice.

They are however offering remote consultations either by telephone or preferably using video calling platforms such as Skype.

Your Manager can arrange a consultation on your behalf by contacting info@midlothianphysiotherapy.co.uk. You will need to provide a telephone number for your manager to pass on and the team at Midlothian Physiotherapy will call you back to arrange a suitable means of contact and a time.
